2011 has shown rough times for American small business, with 9 out of every 10 traditional business loan applicant being denied of financing options, reports Merchant Cash in Advance.

Most businesses in American have turned to alternative financing, unsecured lending in the form of cash advancement. The most popular of which being Merchant Cash Advances for 2011, with over 27,000 American small businesses utilizing various Merchant Cash Advance programs.

Unfortunately for those in the construction business, Merchant Cash Advances were simply not an option due to their lack of regular credit card sales.

Construction business owners around the US that apply for traditional business loans have now been given the alternative option of funding that does not need credit approval or require collateral. "Cash flow issues are common in the construction industry, and many owners have turned to merchantcashinadvance.com to meet the day to day needs of their business." says Mike Butler, VP of Operations at Merchantcashinadvance.
