Merchant Cash Advance Working Capital Solutions With Factoring

Posted : 1 month ago

By: MerchantCashAdvance

Ideal Candidates for Accounts Receivable Factoring:

Any business that provides a product or service to other creditworthy businesses and is constrained by their day-to-day Merchant Cash Advance cash flow situation.

What is factoring?

In a traditional factoring arrangement, a company actually sells its receivables to another company (a "factor") at a discount. After the sale, the receivables Merchant Cash Advance balances are carried on the factor's balance sheet since title has passed. Because the factor then owns the receivables, it generally provides all the required credit, collection and accounting services necessary to collect the receivables, including assumption of the ultimate loss exposure from the client debtor. The important Merchant Cash Advance difference between factoring and Merchant Cash Advance asset-based lending is ownership. In factoring, the receivables are purchased and owned by the factor. In asset-based lending arrangements, accounts receivable are pledged to the lender as security for the loan, but the borrower Merchant Cash Advance retains ownership and complete control of the receivables and the value of the receivables remains on the borrower's financial statement.

Keeping the cash Merchant Cash Advance flowing is a challenge for all businesses. Does your company face cash flow challenges because of slow paying Merchant Cash Advance customers? Have you been forced to decline new opportunities because of cash flow issues?

As every business owner knows, Merchant Cash Advance sales alone do not measure Merchant Cash Advance the profitability of a company. For example, sales may be increasing, but a company may have to wait weeks or even months for payment. During that time, your Merchant Cash Advance company cannot purchase materials for Merchant Cash Advance more orders, meet payroll, or other basic operating expenses. The solutions Merchant Cash Advance may be Accounts Receivable Funding provided through Diversified Funding Services, Inc. Accounts Receivable Funding is quickly becoming a popular choice for its flexibility and rapid injection of needed capital.

Why Accounts Receivable Funding is a Merchant Cash Advance Popular Choice in Today's Business World

Accounts Receivable Funding or "factoring" has been in existence for several decades. Today, virtually any-sized business that extends credit to other businesses for goods or services Merchant Cash Advance can enjoy the many benefits of Accounts Receivable Funding.

Simply stated, Account Receivable Funding is the exchange of creditworthy commercial accounts receivable for an immediate injection of working capital. When an invoice is generated, it may be purchased with an advance of anywhere between 75 to 90% of the net invoice amount. When your customer pays the invoice, you will receive the reserve portion minus a nominal servicing fee.
